Terms and Conditions for Abstract Submission

By submitting an abstract to the 2026 North American Biochar Conference (NABC 2026), you agree to the following terms and conditions.

Publication Rights and Recording
By submitting an abstract and, if selected, participating in the conference, you consent to the use of your name, likeness, voice, and submitted materials by the American Biochar Institute (ABI) for educational and promotional purposes.

You authorize conference organizers to record, reproduce, and distribute your presentation and related materials, including slides, audio, video, and other supplementary content, through conference channels and post-event resources.

Presentation materials may also be shared with conference attendees.
If you do not wish for your presentation or materials to be recorded or shared, you must notify the conference organizers in writing prior to the event.

Copyright
Authors retain copyright of their presentation materials and intellectual property.
By submitting an abstract, authors grant the conference organizers limited permission to use submitted materials for conference-related purposes, including event promotion, educational use, and conference archives.

Authors confirm that all submitted materials are original or used with appropriate permission from the copyright holder.

Speaker Participation
Participation as a speaker is voluntary. Speakers will not receive monetary compensation, honoraria, or fees for their presentation.

Speakers are responsible for their own travel, accommodation, and conference registration unless otherwise specified by the conference organizers.

Presentation Accuracy & Claims
Authors are responsible for ensuring that all claims, data, and representations made in their submission and presentation are accurate and not misleading. The conference organizers reserve the right to remove or restrict content that is determined to be inaccurate, misleading, or not aligned with the objectives of the conference.

Commercial Neutrality Enforcement
Presentations must not be used as a platform for direct sales, product promotion, or marketing. The conference organizers reserve the right to modify, reassign, or remove presentations that are determined to be primarily promotional in nature.

Program Modification Rights
The conference organizers reserve the right to modify session formats, scheduling, presentation types, or session assignments as needed to support the overall program design.

Speaker Cancellation / No-Show
If a selected speaker is unable to participate, they must notify the conference organizers as soon as possible. Repeated cancellations or failure to present may impact eligibility for future participation.

Submission Acceptance Disclaimer
Submission of an abstract does not guarantee acceptance. All submissions are subject to review and selection by the conference program committee.

Professional Conduct
All speakers and participants are expected to maintain professionalism, respect, and inclusivity throughout the event and across conference-related platforms. Harassment, discrimination, or harmful conduct of any kind will not be tolerated.

These expectations apply to all conference activities, including sessions, networking events, social gatherings, and digital platforms associated with the event.

Accuracy and Responsibility
Authors are responsible for ensuring the accuracy and integrity of their submitted abstracts and presentation materials. Conference organizers are not responsible for verifying the accuracy of submitted information.

Acceptance of Submission Criteria
By submitting an abstract, you confirm that you have read, understood, and agreed to all submission guidelines and evaluation criteria associated with the conference.
Submissions that do not adhere to these guidelines may be declined without review.

Contact
If you have questions regarding these terms or the submission process, please contact: Conference Team. North American Biochar Council dba American Biochar Institute tina@biochar-us.org